BISHOP THOMAS AITKEN

What does it mean to believe, and have faith, as Lutheran Christians? As Lutheran men? The word believe means different things to different people. The word faith has undergone a number of definitions overtime. In this 500 anniversary of the Reformation we will delve into the treasures of our Lutheran past that equip us for life in the 21st-century. Bishop will remind us of the potential pitfalls of majoring in the minors, and then overlooking God's faithfulness. And there will be plenty of time to engage Bishop and Aitken and all things related to our Synod, and the wider church.

Richard Bruxvoort Colligan is a song composer for the wider church. As a student of the psalms, he shares his passion for lifelong spiritual formation through these ancient texts and music. He graduated from United Theological Seminary of the Twin Cities with a degree in theology and the arts. He tours nationally, performing concerts, directing some workshops, and leading events across denominations. Richard, regrettably, also enjoys awful puns. He lives in Strawberry Point Iowa with his wife Trish, teenage son Sam, and Willow the dog. Free listening of Richard's music at psalmimmersion.com and worldmaking.net

Breakout sessions will be coming soon. To include: “Life of Luther in two sessions” by Rev. Dennis Raymond. Includes slides of his tour to the German sites. More breakouts to be announced.
